Introduction

- The Hungarian educational system does not insure equal opportunities.
- These institutions are worsening the success of poor and Roma children in school, and later their chances on the labour-market.
- Inequalities can generate social conflicts.

Results of PISA (2000,2003,2006)

- Hungary is the country, where the social background of the family has the biggest influence on the students' efficiency.
- The differences between the students' efficiencies in Hungary was explained - in a projecting compass - through the social profile of the school given, so we can say, that the impact of the familial background is escalating through the social profile of the school given.
- After several tests it is clear, that the schools' socio-economic status is the one, which explains more the results of learning, than the children's familial background.

Segregation in the school year of 2003/2004

- 178 primary schools with Roma majority
- 3000 classes with Roma majority
- 800 homogeneous Roma SNI (disability) classes

Lack of success in school

- Roma children are 9-10 times more often false-diagnosed as being disabled.
- The one-seventh of Roma students go to high-schools, which give the opportunity of graduating.
- The two-third of Roma students get such a degree, which does not gives any chance on the labour-market.
