Agenda item 117

The United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

Activities of the United Nations system in implementing the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

Report of the Secretary-General

I. Introduction

1. In 2006, the General Assembly adopted the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy (resolution 60/288) by consensus and has since reviewed it every two years. The resulting four review resolutions add to the content of the Strategy and provide guidance on its implementation. The Assembly, in its resolution 68/276, requested the Secretary-General to submit a report no later than April 2016. The present report and its recommendations are intended to stimulate further discussion on the themes laid out a decade ago in the Strategy, reinforcing the critical importance of comprehensive and purposeful international cooperation to effectively prevent violent extremism and counter-terrorism and the role that the United Nations should play in strengthening such cooperation.

2. The General Assembly has made clear that the primary responsibility for the implementation of the Strategy rests with Member States. In addition, it has recognized the important role of the United Nations system in promoting coordination and coherence in the implementation of the Strategy at the national, regional and global levels and in providing assistance to Member States where requested. The Secretariat, agencies, funds and programmes, and affiliated organizations contribute to the implementation of the Strategy through their individual mandates and their membership in the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force. There are currently 38 members of the Task Force, with the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force Office in the Department of Political Affairs promoting coordination and coherence among them under the chairmanship of the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs.

3. The present report outlines the important shifts that have occurred in the global terrorism landscape in the past 10 years, the challenges and opportunities that remain and the importance of international cooperation to effectively fulfil the objectives of the Strategy. It concludes with recommendations on the way forward.

* Reissued for technical reasons on 11 May 2016.

It also contains two attachments as supplementary information: first, a listing of international legal instruments and relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions pertaining to terrorism and, second, a summary of the core activities of United Nations entities in implementing the Strategy and a matrix of counter-terrorism projects implemented by United Nations entities around the world.

II. Emerging trends since the adoption of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

4. Since its adoption in 2006, the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy has seen important progress in its implementation, but has also encountered unforeseen challenges, especially with the rise of new types of terrorism-related threats to international peace and security. The most significant challenge is the spread of violent extremist ideologies and the emergence of terrorist groups fuelled by them. Violent extremism is a diverse phenomenon, without an internationally agreed definition. Nevertheless, in recent years, terrorist groups such as Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), Al-Qaida and Boko Haram have shaped our image of terrorism and violent extremism and the debate on how to address this threat. These groups transcend national boundaries, underscoring the need for increased international cooperation to prevent, counter and combat them.

5. Some of the phenomena that have contributed to resentment and unfulfilled aspirations include the international community's inability to resolve protracted conflicts and prevent new ones; military interventions; the disregard for international law, including human rights and international humanitarian law; the insufficient implementation of Security Council and General Assembly resolutions; the rise of prejudice directed against particular religions, ethnicities and cultures; the failure to meet governance challenges; slow socioeconomic development and the entrenchment of marginalization and exclusion in some societies; and rising inequality between and within States. These phenomena point to the difficulties faced by the international community in addressing the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism and violent extremism.

6. In recent years, terrorist and violent extremist groups have inflicted immense damage. The statistics are frightening: thousands of civilians killed and wounded in terrorist-related incidents in the past decade and millions of men, women and children displaced or forced to flee their homes. Women and children, in particular, suffer, given that many have been sexually abused and enslaved.

7. Most of the suffering is a direct result of conflicts and wars that have grown in number and intensity since 2008 and that, in many cases, are characterized by the involvement of terrorist actors. The United Nations has been affected, with field missions and country teams in Africa, Asia and the Middle East attacked. As a result, terrorism has increasingly been on the agenda of the Security Council.

8. In 2006, according to the widely used Global Terrorism Database website, there were 2,729 terrorist incidents worldwide, many of those occurring in Afghanistan, Iraq and other places of conflict. The following year, the number of attacks rose to 3,236 and to 4,779 in 2008. It fell slightly to 4,713 in 2009, rising to 4,782 in 2010. The number has climbed sharply since then: 2014 saw almost a quadrupling of the 2010 figure, to 16,818. The rise in incidents, especially since 2012, is attributable to ISIL and Al-Qaida having gained momentum from wars in Iraq, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen, where they control sizeable territory.

9. In 2006, terrorist groups had a certain freedom of movement from their bases in ungoverned spaces. Al-Qaida sought to be a vanguard, preparing the conditions for a takeover of the State in some Muslim majority countries. Its success was limited and resulted in many deaths, almost invariably of fellow Muslims. However, Al-Qaida set the stage for the emergence of a more ruthless and determined form of terrorism. Al-Qaida in Iraq became Islamic State of Iraq in 2006 and then ISIL in 2013 before finally calling itself simply Islamic State and declaring the re-establishment of the caliphate in 2014.

10. ISIL and Al-Qaida remain indistinguishable in terms of their vision and ultimate objectives, but they differ in terms of tactics. From its beginnings, Al-Qaida has believed that it should work patiently, while ISIL believes that it has to force the pace. The latter group seized territory and made the consolidation of its control and the expansion of its reach the pillars of its policy. ISIL still controls a sizeable area of Iraq and the Syrian Arab Republic and has expanded its reach through affiliates in Libya, Yemen and West Africa, while claiming “provinces” in other countries. One of the affiliates of ISIL, Boko Haram, has been particularly notorious and lethal. ISIL has also inspired, encouraged or directed attacks in faraway countries including Australia, Bangladesh, Belgium, Canada, France, Indonesia, Pakistan, Somalia, Turkey and the United States of America. In addition, it has attracted recruits from more than 80 countries, posing a potential threat to security when those fighters return home. Spurred to compete, Al-Qaida and its affiliates have established control of territory, most notably in Somalia, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen, and continue to mount attacks in Europe and North, West and East Africa, as well as in Asia.

11. Transnational terrorist groups have generally found it easier to survive than those with a more nationalist agenda, which suggests that international cooperation has been less effective than national action. The two exceptions are the Taliban in Afghanistan and Al-Shabaab in Somalia, which remain strong because the Governments in those countries continue to lack the capacity, resources and support necessary to defeat them.

12. Terrorist tactics have also evolved. Suicide bombings have become more common, but so have mass-casualty and complex attacks mounted by a group of attackers working together in one or multiple locations and expecting to die. There has been an increasing trend towards attacks that cost little and require minimal training and planning but which nonetheless have a significant impact. Terrorists have become more likely to operate alone or in small groups, inspired rather than directed by high-profile terrorist organizations to attack at a time and place of each individual’s choosing, rendering detection virtually impossible.

13. Another worrying trend has been the growing tolerance of terrorism by States, especially when terrorists attack rivals. This attitude underestimates the deeply corrosive impact of terrorism on both national and international peace and security. Terrorism remains a common threat and a shared concern, regardless of its immediate target.

14. The role of the media and the use of social media by terrorist and violent extremist groups have gained a new quality and thus constitute an increasingly important dimension to address. Even foiled plots attract media attention, serving the perpetrators' purpose of spreading fear and prompting a reaction. This illustrates the risk of the media both in empowering terrorist groups and in attracting new recruits. Advances in communications technology, in particular the Internet, have amplified messages and influenced recruitment patterns. Terrorist and violent extremist groups have shown flexibility and inventiveness, tapping into feelings of disillusionment, injustice and alienation and a yearning for purpose of disaffected young people, including women and girls. Most new recruits are now from 17 to 27 years of age, with differing levels of education and social and economic backgrounds. This has made the task of understanding and countering the appeal of terrorism all the more difficult, and the international community has found it hard to respond effectively. The importance of protecting an individual's right to freedom of expression has to be balanced with the need to protect a vulnerable audience from incitement to hatred, discrimination or violence.

III. International response to the evolving terrorist threat

15. That these developments have occurred, and even increased, as the world has poured more resources into countering terrorism raises profound questions:

(a) Have Member States sufficiently implemented the relevant counter-terrorism legal instruments and norms not only to counter terrorism but also to address the conditions that give rise to it?

(b) Has the United Nations system been successful in providing the requested assistance to Member States in preventing violent extremism and countering terrorism?

(c) Above all, are the tools and resources at the disposal of the international community for prevention sufficient to meet and overcome the challenges posed by terrorism and violent extremism?

16. The adoption of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy saw unprecedented international consensus on the need for joint action against terrorism. One of its great achievements has been to maintain the agreement that all Member States are affected and thus have an interest in contributing. The Secretary-General strongly believes that the Strategy is as relevant today as it was 10 years ago. International cooperation, through the effective implementation of the Strategy, is not only desirable but also more urgent than ever. In order to ensure greater success in its implementation, the international community must recommit itself to a comprehensive and balanced implementation of all four of the Strategy's pillars. The capacity of Member States to prevent and counter terrorism has grown, as has the supporting role of the United Nations in providing capacity-building assistance. Nevertheless, despite a great deal of activity, not enough has been achieved to address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism, nor in ensuring respect for human rights and the rule of law while countering terrorism.

17. The Plan of Action to Prevent Violent Extremism put forward by the Secretary-General (see A/70/674) is aimed at further strengthening efforts to address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism and violent extremism by focusing further upstream, beyond the traditional point of intervention, to prevent violent extremism and, ultimately, terrorism. This approach is consistent with the focus of the Secretary-General on prevention in all its aspects and complements the importance of prevention, as underscored by the high-level reviews and processes that were undertaken in 2015, including the review by the High-level Independent Panel on Peace Operations (see A/70/95-S/2015/446) and the follow-up report of the Secretary-General on the future of United Nations peace operations (A/70/357-S/2015/682), the global study on women and peace and security and the expert review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture (A/69/968-S/2015/490).

18. As the world moves into the next decade, it will need to further strengthen international cooperation to more effectively counter terrorism and prevent violent extremism. A frank assessment of the past 10 years since the Strategy's adoption is a necessary beginning.

A. Development of a normative and legal framework

19. The international community has responded to the challenge by developing the legal framework and putting in place arrangements for its judicious implementation. The United Nations has been at the forefront of developing the international normative and legal framework to address terrorism in all its manifestations. Currently, this framework includes the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism and human rights, the Strategy and the relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions. (see annex I).

20. In addition, Member States continue to negotiate a comprehensive convention on international terrorism to further strengthen international cooperation. Moreover, many have developed their own national legislative framework on the basis of the existing international framework and have cooperated bilaterally and regionally to strengthen action against terrorism.

B. Progress made in the implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy by Member States and United Nations entities

21. Member States have made great efforts to implement the four pillars of the Strategy. Many have also worked bilaterally and multilaterally to advance regional and international counter-terrorism cooperation. The Secretariat has received submissions from the following Member States reporting largely on their implementation of the Strategy: Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belarus, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Canada, Cuba, Cyprus, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, India, Iraq, Israel, Japan, Kazakhstan, Latvia, Lebanon, the Netherlands, Norway, Oman, the Russian Federation, Serbia, Slovenia, the Sudan, Switzerland, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, Ukraine, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States and Zambia. In addition, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the European Union provided submissions on their activities in support of the Strategy. These submissions are available to all Member States from the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force Office in the Department of Political Affairs upon request.

22. At the same time, United Nations entities with core counter-terrorism mandates, as well as those with relevant programming and activities, have continued to assist Member States in the implementation of the Strategy. Some of the major activities being carried out by these entities since the previous review in 2014 are listed in annex II, which also consists of a matrix of United Nations entity activities.

C. Coordination, coherence and the “All-of-United Nations” approach

23. Pursuant to the previous report of the Secretary-General, in which he vowed to further strengthen coordination and coherence within the United Nations system in the provision of counter-terrorism assistance to Member States through a “One United Nations” approach, work in this area has progressed. In 2014 and 2015, several of the pre-existing inter-agency working groups of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force were reorganized thematically to address new and emerging challenges.

24. The time has come to harness collective efforts to more systematically implement an “All-of-United Nations” approach. There is a need to better integrate efforts towards a common purpose, devising multifaceted responses.

25. In practical terms, this means that entities that are engaged directly in addressing the challenges of terrorism and violent extremism should develop strategies collaboratively and that those with an indirect role should ensure that their activities are sensitive to both preventing violent extremism and countering terrorism. The Task Force’s entities must do so through stronger collaboration through the Task Force framework, thereby improving the flow of information, resources and expertise to strengthen efficiency, accountability and the impact of activities on the ground. National ownership is crucial to success and efforts must always be aligned with those of the host Governments and the people served.

26. The importance of the All-of-United Nations approach was demonstrated both at the thematic and technical levels when coordinating the development of an implementation plan of priority capacity-building projects to stem the flow of foreign terrorist fighters, as recommended by the Security Council (see S/PRST/2015/11). An ad hoc Task Force inter-agency working group on such fighters identified for the first phase 37 mutually reinforcing capacity-building projects to be implemented by 12 United Nations entities on priority areas determined by the assessment of the criticality of the projects by the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate. These projects are intended to address the entire “life cycle” of foreign terrorist fighters, including their radicalization, training, travel to conflict zones, financing, fighting, potential return and reactivation, as well as reintegration and rehabilitation should they return.

27. Another example of the All-of-United Nations approach is the Task Force’s Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism initiative, which brings together a number of United Nations entities to deliver coordinated and coherent capacity-building assistance to Member States that request it. All parts of the United Nations system in the requesting country, including the Resident Coordinator, Special Representative and other United Nations country team members, are partners throughout the life cycle of the projects. While continuing to support Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism programming in Mali and Nigeria, in the face of the threats that the countries of the Sahel are confronting, the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre has initiated planning to expand its Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism initiative to all the countries of the Group of Five for the Sahel and to some West African countries, at their request, as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 2195 (2014) and in the statement by the President of the Security Council of 8 December 2015 (S/PRST/2015/24).

28. The Secretary-General is confident that the All-of-United Nations approach will assist in mainstreaming counter-terrorism priorities across the United Nations system and harmonize the approaches of United Nations entities, in line with the broader prevention agenda of the United Nations.

IV. Building international collaboration for the next decade

29. It is clear that, as terrorism and violent extremism continue to evolve in new and unpredictable directions, efforts to address these phenomena must also evolve. There is a need for increased international cooperation and collaboration in critical areas of counter-terrorism at the global, regional and subregional levels. Cooperation is also needed through North-South and South-South cooperation to ensure that the best practices of the most affected States are shared early to help to prevent the spread of terrorism and violent extremism to other countries.

A. Measures to promote the balanced implementation of all four pillars of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

30. In his previous report (A/68/841), the Secretary-General stressed that the success of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy depended on a balanced implementation of all four pillars. With respect to pillar II of the Strategy, many Member States have understandably focused on using their scarce resources to augment and strengthen their security and criminal justice sectors to counter terrorism. However, while States have strengthened law enforcement and security measures, prevention efforts have lacked similar attention and resources. Human rights concerns and obligations, so central to counter-terrorism efforts, have regrettably been a low priority for several Member States.

31. While there are new and encouraging signs that Member States are beginning to focus on pillars I and IV of the Strategy, efforts must be accelerated. Addressing conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism, as called for by pillar I, needs to be placed at the heart of preventive efforts. Doing so must also acknowledge the important role and needs of women and girls, who are increasingly bearing the brunt of terrorist acts and being radicalized and recruited by terrorist groups. Equally important to prevention is the need to focus on young people. Effective action in this area would entail a renewed focus on conflict prevention and resolution; fostering dialogue, understanding and social inclusion; equitable and just socioeconomic development; and promoting the positive role that women and young people can play in society.

32. Likewise, the world cannot afford to create more terrorists while trying to counter them. The importance of pillar IV of the Strategy, which stresses upholding human rights and the rule of law while countering terrorism, cannot be overstated. The Secretary-General is pleased to note that Member States have begun to request the assistance of the United Nations in raising the awareness of and training their security and law enforcement officers in this crucial area.

B. Prevention of violent extremism

33. Violent extremism, just as terrorism, is a threat to all Member States, whether directly or indirectly. For the past few years, the international community's response to violent extremism has been aimed mostly at countering the threat. While these efforts must continue, it is also necessary to broaden the approach, engage earlier and address the drivers of violent extremism.

34. The Plan of Action to Prevent Violent Extremism approaches violent extremism with a prevention lens, complementing and further strengthening pillars I and IV of the Strategy. It outlines a series of measures designed to prevent violent extremism upstream, taking a practical approach to addressing the underlying drivers of violent extremism at the national, regional and global levels. Most of its 70 recommendations are addressed to Member States, which have the primary responsibility to prevent violent extremism.

35. The key recommendation of the Plan of Action is that every Member State should consider developing a national plan of action to prevent violent extremism, taking into account the local and national drivers of violent extremism. Such plans should follow an "all-of-government" and "all-of-society" approach to promote synergies among all actors. The Plan of Action also suggests complementing national plans with subregional and regional plans.

36. The Secretary-General has suggested that national and regional plans should include elements that reflect seven priority areas: dialogue and conflict prevention; strengthening good governance, human rights and the rule of law; engaging communities; empowering young people; gender equality and empowering women; education, skills development and employment facilitation; and strategic communications, including through the Internet and social media.

37. Member States will need to take the lead in developing and implementing their national and regional plans of action to prevent violent extremism. The United Nations system can assist them. It will also need to review its activities to ensure that it is doing everything possible to assist Governments in addressing the local drivers of violent extremism and that all relevant entities collaborate in developing specific deliverables in the seven priority areas identified.

38. On 7 and 8 April 2016, the Secretary-General co-chaired the Geneva Conference on Preventing Violent Extremism: the Way Forward with the Government of Switzerland. A total of 745 participants from 125 Member States, 23 international and regional organizations and 26 United Nations, entities, as well as 67 civil society organizations and private companies, participated. The Secretary-General was encouraged by the strong response to his call for action and unity in implementing his Plan of Action. The Conference helped to identify areas of convergence and considered different points of view relating to the prevention of violent extremism. It also provided a valuable forum to give further consideration to the Plan of Action within the context of the General Assembly's consideration of the Strategy.

C. Role of the United Nations in enhancing international cooperation

39. The United Nations is well positioned to enhance collaboration at the national, regional and global levels. Its membership provides it with an unparalleled convening authority that can be harnessed to build political momentum for stronger international cooperation in specific areas of counter-terrorism. The United Nations can draw on the resources and expertise of its diverse membership to assist other Member States. Many Member States are increasingly turning to the United Nations for assistance. United Nations entities have risen to the challenge by marshalling resources to deliver critical programmes. More efforts are needed, however. Projects that build national capacity are in particular demand. Assistance such as “train-the-trainers” initiatives in various counter-terrorism fields is a critical need to build national capacities.

40. Another area that can benefit from strong international cooperation, and in which the United Nations can assist, is the need to develop and disseminate best practices that could guide Member State policies as they seek human rights-compliant measures with which to address the new and emerging threats lawfully and effectively. In this regard, the Secretary-General acknowledges the valuable contributions that regional and international organizations such as the European Union, the Council of Europe and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe have made to the development and dissemination of relevant best practices. The United Nations will continue to work with all such organizations and strengthen its own efforts by developing best practices that are made available for the benefit of all Member States.

41. Many United Nations entities are deeply involved in providing capacity-building assistance to Member States in critical areas of counter-terrorism. The Secretary-General thanks the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team pursuant to Security Council resolutions 1526 (2004) and 2253 (2015) concerning Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) (Da’esh), Al-Qaida and the Taliban and associated individuals and entities, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Expert Group of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540 (2004), the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the Department of Political Affairs, the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations, the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute, the United Nations Development Programme, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and all others for their invaluable contribution to these efforts. With the establishment of the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre, there are now additional means to catalyse capacity-building assistance across all four pillars of the Strategy.

42. In the past two years, the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre has received recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and individual Member States for its efforts in building the capacities of Member States to implement the Strategy. A new five-year programme for the period 2016-2020 was presented in December 2015 to provide strategic focus on fewer and larger projects. The Centre has identified 12 key thematic areas clustered in four broad outcomes in which the Centre will contribute to the full implementation of the Strategy at the global, regional and national levels: countering and preventing violent extremism, combating terrorism, human rights and support for victims and international cooperation.

V. Observations and recommendations

Agenda for international cooperation

43. Terrorism violates the fundamental principles of the United Nations. It is not justified under any circumstances. Terrorism cannot be associated with any religion, nationality, civilization or ethnic group. Demonizing specific religions, ethnicities and cultures is contrary to human rights, feeds into violent extremist narratives and encourages xenophobia, which can cause irreparable damage to efforts to prevent violent extremism and counter terrorism.

44. The continuing relevance of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy depends on strong cooperation between Member States at the global, regional and national levels. The Secretary-General pledges to leverage the universal membership and convening power of the United Nations to further strengthen international cooperation at these levels.

45. Countering terrorism requires international consensus. The Strategy, as a consensus document of the General Assembly, forms a solid platform upon which Member States can collaborate. This consensus of the global community against terrorism must be preserved and strengthened. The following agenda for international cooperation is grounded in the Strategy and prioritizes key actions that will strengthen its balanced implementation across its four pillars. Necessary and short-term military responses must be complemented with medium-term and longer-term preventive measures, all of which must be underpinned by respect for human rights and the rule of law.

46. The primary responsibility for implementation of the Strategy rests with Member States. However, the United Nations system, through the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force framework, has a significant role in supporting implementation at the national, regional and global levels. Best practices that guide Member States are a necessity. The Secretary-General pledges that the United Nations system will intensify its work in developing and disseminating best practices and expertise in relevant counter-terrorism fields encompassing all four pillars of the Strategy, which can benefit Member States.

47. The Secretary-General is encouraged that there are now several international and regional forums, such as the Global Counterterrorism Forum, working to assist in the implementation of the Strategy. The Secretary-General urges all such organizations to partner with the United Nations to align its efforts in a way that catalyses the implementation of the Strategy in an efficient and coordinated manner.

48. The demand on the United Nations to provide capacity-building assistance in counter-terrorism matters has increased, but its resources remain limited. For example, the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre has an annual budget of only $20 million to spend on capacity-building projects for all Member States, whereas some States spend billions of dollars annually in military-security responses to terrorism. The United Nations must be strategic and prioritize its assistance to the most affected countries and regions of the world if it is to be effective. The Secretary-General calls upon all Member States to provide the support necessary for “One United Nations” efforts by contributing significantly more resources, both in terms of funding and technical expertise. In this context, the Secretary-General welcomes the recent decision by the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development to count Member State funding for several peace and security activities, including certain areas of conflict prevention and preventing violent extremism activities, towards the United Nations target for an official development assistance/gross national income ratio of 0.7 per cent.

49. The Secretary-General also pledges that the United Nations will support South-South cooperation by promoting the sharing of resources, expertise and best practices among countries of the South that have valuable experiences to share with the international community. This is a vast untapped resource that needs to be mobilized.

50. The efficient and transparent utilization of resources is of vital importance. The Secretary-General will continue to strengthen transparent mechanisms for setting goals and outcomes and measuring the impact of United Nations projects and activities. Task Force entities that undertake such projects will continue to develop and implement measurable indicators and benchmarks to strengthen the impact of their projects.

51. In recent years, United Nations special political missions and peacekeeping operations have increasingly been deployed in areas beset by violent extremism and terrorism. Impermissible security environments and the unpredictability and hostility of terrorist actors have negatively affected the ability of United Nations missions to deliver on their mandates. There is a need to integrate prevention of violent extremism and countering terrorism into the Organization's broader conflict prevention and conflict management efforts, especially through its field missions. The Secretary-General believes that his special representatives and envoys operating in such environments would benefit considerably if they were able to draw on the expertise of counter-terrorism advisers, in accordance with their mandates. Such advisers could assist in mainstreaming counter-terrorism into the mission's activities, where applicable, and catalyse the capacity-building efforts of host Governments and regional organizations in key areas, as prescribed by the Strategy's four pillars.

Pillar I: measures to address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism

52. The Secretary-General urges Member States to attach high priority to the prevention of violent extremism and has made it a top priority in his final year in office. He has taken good note of the constructive discussions held by the General Assembly in February on the Plan of Action to Prevent Violent Extremism and appreciates that the Assembly welcomed the initiative in its resolution 70/254. He also welcomes the substantive discussions held on the Plan of Action at the ministerial level in Geneva on 8 April 2016 and looks forward to further discussions during the fifth review of the Strategy, in June 2016. He hopes that Member States will forge a strong consensus in support of the Plan of Action that effectively supplements pillars I and IV of the Strategy.

53. Further to the Plan of Action, the Secretary-General recommends that Member States develop national and regional plans of action on the prevention of violent extremism that take into account the seven priority elements reflected in the Plan of Action: dialogue and conflict prevention; strengthening good governance, human rights and the rule of law; engaging communities; empowering young people; gender equality and empowering women; education, skills development and employment facilitation; and strategic communications, the Internet and social media.

54. The Secretary-General is considering how the United Nations system could be better organized to support a more comprehensive approach to countering terrorism and preventing violent extremism. To this end, together with all relevant entities, he will explore options for institutional arrangements.

55. The involvement of civil society is necessary to create the space in which dialogue and alternatives to violent extremism can be promoted. In this context, the active participation of women and young people in the prevention and counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations was highlighted in the Plan of Action as two priority areas for attention by Member States. Women and young people, from the community level to senior government officials, must be given the space to have their voices heard on the impact of terrorism or violent extremism on their lives and the strategies used to address these threats. In that respect, the Secretary-General recommends that Member States and the United Nations ensure greater integration between the counter-terrorism and women and peace and security agendas, as called for by the Security Council in its resolution 2242 (2015). He also urges United Nations entities to mainstream gender into their counter-terrorism work.

56. The Secretary-General encourages Member States to implement Security Council resolution 2250 (2015) by involving young people in decision-making at all levels for the prevention and resolution of conflict, including institutions and mechanisms to counter violent extremism.

Pillar II: measures to prevent and combat terrorism

57. While moving the pendulum towards pillars I and IV, efforts must nevertheless be made to continue to strengthen and build on existing collaboration arrangements and the successes achieved in countering terrorism over the past 10 years. In particular, the Security Council, in its resolution 2178 (2014), called upon all Member States to cooperate urgently on preventing the international flow of foreign terrorist fighters by strengthening border control and anti-terrorist financing measures, as well as other related activities that would be required, including educational efforts in support of tolerance, pluralism and deradicalization. The Secretary-General recommends that Member States cooperate closely with one another, as well as with United Nations entities, by sharing information, best practices and other resources, including by participating in relevant projects under the framework of the United Nations foreign terrorist fighters capacity-building implementation plan.

58. The Secretary-General recognizes the good progress made by Member States through bilateral and multilateral mechanisms to strengthen border security measures. The International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) has assisted in these efforts by developing and strengthening essential tools and resources. However, many Member States are yet to share relevant information. The Secretary-General urges all Member States and regional organizations to cooperate and feed information into relevant INTERPOL databases if the challenges relating to border control are to be addressed.

59. Another area in which more international cooperation is needed is with respect to Security Council resolution 2178 (2014), in which the Council called for airlines to provide advance passenger information to the appropriate national authorities in order to detect the departure from, attempted entry into or transit through their territories of individuals designated by the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolutions 1267 (1999), 1989 (2011) and 2253 (2015) concerning Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (Da'esh), Al-Qaida and associated individuals, groups, undertakings and entities. The Secretary-General recommends that Member States strengthen the implementation of advance passenger information and other such systems with the support of relevant Task Force entities, including the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, ICAO, the International Organization for Migration, the International Air Transport Association, INTERPOL and the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre, and introduce legal mechanisms to promote compliance with international human rights norms and standards that ensure that national laws address the potential conflict between advance passenger information obligations on the one hand and privacy and data protection laws on the other.

60. As emphasized by the Security Council in its resolution 2253 (2015), disrupting the financing of terrorist activities has become increasingly important, given that groups such as ISIL pose new terrorist financing challenges owing to their access to multiple revenue streams, including counterfeiting, kidnapping for ransom and trafficking, as well as the sale of women and girls. Although most Member States have criminalized terrorist financing in compliance with the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism and Council resolution 1373 (2001), the number of convictions for terrorist financing remains low. In addition, a significant number of States are not in full compliance with the related recommendation of the Financial Action Task Force and few States have implemented the specific obligations under Council resolution 2178 (2014) to counter the financing of travel of foreign terrorist fighters. The Secretary-General recommends that the international community redouble its efforts to build the capacity of financial oversight and regulatory systems around the world in order to deny terrorists the space to exploit and raise funds. Active cooperation with the private sector through public-private partnerships with financial institutions will be essential to make progress in this area. Taking into account the assessments by relevant entities such as the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, UNODC and IMF could provide requisite capacity-building assistance to Member States in order to achieve these objectives.

61. Terrorists have cleverly exploited new communications technologies to radicalize and recruit young people around the world, and there is a significant risk that they could launch cyberterrorism with devastating effect in the coming years. This demonstrates the need for increased international cooperation to counter Internet radicalization and recruitment, but it must be done in a manner that ensures and promotes freedom of expression and upholds international human rights norms and standards. A related focus must be on preventing acts of cyberterrorism by individuals associated with violent extremism and terrorism. Modern electronic communications networks provide the backbone to the most critical infrastructure, including the essential functions of Government and industry. Safeguarding this infrastructure from cyberterrorism cannot succeed without stronger partnerships with the private sector.

62. The potential acquisition and use of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear materials, by terrorist groups would pose a clear threat to international peace and security. It is a threat that consists of multiple overlapping elements, including the growing nexus between terrorism, weapons of mass destruction and cyberthreats. It must be addressed in a holistic and coordinated manner. To confront this threat, the United Nations system needs to work as one. The Secretary-General intends to strengthen United Nations efforts to address the challenges of nuclear security and terrorism by consulting Member States on a comprehensive United Nations approach. He will ensure a coordinated response to this issue across the Secretariat and partner international organizations. He will also strive for the universal and complete implementation of Security Council resolution 1540 (2004) and the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism.

63. Progress in all the areas described above will continue to depend on the cooperation and sharing of actionable information within the international community.

Pillar III: measures to build States' capacity to prevent and combat terrorism and to strengthen the role of the United Nations system in this regard

64. The coordinated capacity-building of Member States in key areas of counter-terrorism must be a priority. Many United Nations entities are providing capacity-building assistance in counter-terrorism, and such efforts must be further strengthened through effective monitoring and evaluation. The Task Force will further strengthen coordination among and the coherence of the work of its 38 member entities through its revitalized inter-agency working groups, doing its utmost to minimize duplication and promoting transparency and the more effective utilization of donor resources, while maximizing impact on the ground in support of Member States.

65. The United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre and other parts of the United Nations system will continue to provide capacity-building assistance to Member States and regional organizations to advance the implementation of all four pillars of the Strategy in a balanced manner. The Centre's five-year programme for the period 2016-2020 provides the framework for this engagement, and the Secretary-General encourages Member States to contribute to developing, funding and implementing capacity-building projects, together with the Centre and other relevant United Nations entities, in order to mobilize a stronger and more systematic response to terrorism at the national, regional and global levels.

66. Given that terrorism is both multidimensional and regional, interregional and intraregional cooperation remains critical. Central Asian Member States have already developed and implemented a regional strategy, and such strategies have recently been adopted by Member States in Central and Southern Africa. States will need to cooperate effectively to mobilize the political will and resources necessary if regional strategies are to be successfully implemented in a balanced and comprehensive manner for sustained impact on the ground. While continuing to support the implementation of these existing strategies, the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre will support the development of regional counter-terrorism strategies in other regions, such as East Africa.

67. Effectively countering terrorism requires strong criminal justice mechanisms to investigate and bring to justice the perpetrators of terrorist acts, including those pertaining to conflict-related sexual violence. It is important that special attention also be given to the development of specialized training for investigators, prosecutors and judges to strengthen the criminal justice response to terrorism in a manner that is compliant with human rights and the rule of law. United Nations entities with specialized mandates and expertise such as UNODC will continue to assist States in this vital area.

Pillar IV: measures to ensure respect for human rights for all and the rule of law as the fundamental basis of the fight against terrorism

68. Member States and individual leaders and officials must respect human rights and the rule of law in accordance with their obligations under international human rights law, as well as international humanitarian law and international refugee law. All legislation, policies, strategies and practices adopted to prevent violent extremism and counter terrorism must be grounded firmly in the respect for human rights and the rule of law.

69. Law enforcement and security officers play a pivotal role in preventing and responding to terrorist attacks and thereby discharging the State's obligation to protect the rights of those under its jurisdiction. Member States must further strengthen their efforts to raise the awareness of their security forces with human rights law and to abide by it in their operations. The Secretary-General encourages more Member States to participate in focused technical assistance projects, such as the Task Force global capacity-building and training project for law enforcement officers on integrating human rights norms and standards and the rule of law into their daily practices and operational guidelines.

70. As efforts are strengthened, the victims and their families who have suffered from acts of terrorism must not be forgotten. Understanding these victims must encompass those fleeing conflict zones where terrorism plays a major role and, especially, women and children who have been kidnapped, brutalized and, in many cases, sexually abused by violent extremists and terrorists. The international community must show responsibility towards all these victims of terrorism.

71. The United Nations conference on the human rights of victims of terrorism, held on 11 February 2016, was an important step that underscored the need for victims' rights to be included in approaches to preventing violent extremism and countering terrorism. Efforts to provide justice to victims and their families, and to address their needs, must be strengthened. The Secretary-General recommends that Member States make every effort to comply with their obligation to bring the perpetrators to justice and to address the needs of victims, utilizing the technical assistance provided by United Nations entities with specialized mandates and expertise in this area, such as UNODC.

72. Victims are the international community's strongest and most courageous allies in exposing the hypocrisy of terrorist and violent extremist narratives. The Secretary-General recommends that the voices of victims be strengthened in order to put forward alternate narratives to those of violent extremists and that solidarity be shown by engaging in global awareness campaigns, including through the Victims of Terrorism Support Portal. He calls upon more Member States to contribute practical information to the Portal in order to strengthen its capacity to support victims.

73. Lastly, the Secretary-General expresses his deepest sympathies to every individual who has suffered from the acts of terrorist groups and violent extremists, as well as to the families and communities of those victims. The United Nations has also suffered from these most tragic losses, and he salutes those staff who have given their lives or been gravely injured while striving to bring peace, stability and hope to troubled parts of the world. All these individuals deserve everyone's deepest respect.

Supplementary information: development of the normative and legal framework*

The 19 international legal instruments consist of: Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft, 1963; Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, 1970; Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, 1971; Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts of Violence at Airports Serving International Civil Aviation, 1988; Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, 1973; International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, 1979; Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, 1980; Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, 2005; Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 1988; Protocol to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 2005; Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, 1988; Protocol to the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf, 2005; Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, 1991; International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, 1997; International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, 1999; International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, 2005; Convention on the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Relating to International Civil Aviation 2010; Protocol Supplementary to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft 2010.

Although a number of terrorism-related resolutions/declarations were adopted by the General Assembly in the past, an important milestone was the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism (A/RES/49/60). Following a report by my predecessor in May 2006, “Uniting against Terrorism: recommendations for a global counter-terrorism strategy”, the General Assembly arrived at a consensus resolution on “The UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy” on 8 September 2006. The Strategy has been reviewed biennially since then. Additionally, from 2006, the General Assembly produced 48 resolutions which have addressed different aspects of terrorism, such as the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism; mandates of specialized UN bodies such as the UN CTITF and UNCCT; and preventing the acquisition by terrorists of radioactive materials and of weapons of mass destruction.

The Security Council initially used its sanctions regime to address terrorism, such as the 1999 adoption of resolution 1267 and 1269 aimed at the Taliban in Afghanistan and later, Al-Qaida and related groups. Subsequent Council resolutions such as resolutions 1373, 1540 and 1624, have strengthened the legal framework for preventing and combatting terrorism. Since 2013, the Council has enacted further resolutions, often invoking Chapter VII, to address new types of terrorist threats. These include, among others, SCR 2133 (2014) which addressed the issues of kidnapping and hostage-taking by terrorists, and SCR 2170 (2014) and 2178 (2014) on suppressing the flow of Foreign Terrorist Fighters (FTFs), financing and other support to terrorist groups in Iraq and Syria. Additionally, SCR 2178 (2014) addressed for the first time the need to counter violent extremism. SCR 2195 (2014) called for international action to prevent terrorists from benefiting from transnational organized crime. Similarly, in 2015, the Council adopted resolution 2199 (2015), aimed to prevent terrorist groups in Iraq and Syria from benefiting from trade in oil, antiquities and hostages, and from receiving donations. Resolution 2242 (2015) outlined sweeping actions to improve implementation of its landmark women, peace and security agenda, covering its work on countering violent extremism and terrorism. In resolution 2253 (2015), the Security Council expanded and strengthened its Al-Qaida sanctions framework to include a focus on ISIL, and outlined efforts to dismantle its funding and support channels. Over the past decade, other key UN bodies, such as the ECOSOC and Human Rights Council, contributed to the Organization's work in this area.

Annex II

Supplementary information: activities of United Nations entities in support of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy*

Many United Nations entities under the UN Counter-Terrorism Task Force framework actively work to implement the four pillars of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. This attachment shows some of the major activities these entities have carried out over the last two years.

Pillar I: Measures to address conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism

Pillar I of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy commits Member States to implement measures to address conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism such as preventing and resolving conflicts, encouraging economic development, reducing social exclusion and marginalization, and fostering understanding among peoples of varied religions and cultures through dialogue. It also emphasizes the need to support victims of terrorism and their families, and in supporting and engaging with civil society groups, particularly women and youth.

Conflict prevention and resolution

The Department of Political Affairs (DPA) is the operational arm for much of my good offices, preventive diplomacy, and mediation work. This work is perhaps best exemplified by my special envoys, advisers and representatives, whether they lead regional political offices (in West Africa, Central Africa and Central Asia), regional strategies (in the Great Lakes Region, in support of the Middle East Peace Process), or are dispatched from Headquarters. Country-specific field-based missions, be they political or peacekeeping missions led, respectively by DPA and DPKO, also undertake preventive work as they look to identify and address possible triggers for a relapse or an escalation of conflict.

Where the United Nations has neither an envoy nor a mission, Resident Coordinators and the United Nations Country Teams assist national actors, at their request, in addressing emerging challenges. The Joint DPA-UNDP Programme on Building National Capacities for Conflict Prevention supports local capacity building in this vein. UNDP and several United Nations agencies, funds and programmes carry out a wide range of “structural” or “upstream” prevention activities aimed at addressing the root causes of conflict. In my capacity as Chair of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, I am engaging the broader United Nations system on how we can collectively strengthen our conflict prevention and peacebuilding work. Lastly, my Human Rights Up Front initiative has at its core a strong focus on prevention of large-scale human rights violations, which are often correlated with an increased risk of conflict.

Promoting economic and social development

Since its founding, the United Nations system has continued its support in this area through its specialised Agencies, Funds and Programmes, and particularly through its UN Country Teams in the field. I extend my sincere gratitude to all Member States as well as the United Nations system for working diligently over the last 15 years to successfully achieve the Millennium Development Goals. Moving forward, I am firm in my belief that the new 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and particularly, SDG16 on building peaceful, just and inclusive societies, will further contribute our efforts to address one of the key conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism.

UNDP's approach to addressing conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism and violent extremism through inclusive development, the promotion of tolerance and respect for diversity serves as an example of our work in the field. It has been assisting Member States and civil society on building two critical sets of capacities: the governance of increasingly diverse and multi-cultural societies, and the mitigation of those factors that provide a tipping point from alienation towards radicalisation and eventually violent extremism. For example, in Mindanao in the Philippines, UNDP is supporting efforts by the Philippines Centre for Islam and Democracy to work with local religious leaders to woo disenchanted youth away from joining violent extremist groups, towards supporting peace-building in their communities. In Syria, UNDP has supported efforts in twelve out of the country's fourteen governorates to maintain social cohesion, through credible local intermediaries and local peace committees, by assisting different groups and sectors to work together to maintain local services. UNDP focuses particularly on the role of youth in peacebuilding. For example, in Bosnia and Herzegovina, UNDP and PBSO have collaborated to promote coexistence, trust and appreciation for diversity, by creating spaces to increase the influence of youth in policy dialogues.

Fostering dialogue and understanding

In 2015 the High Representative of the UN Alliance of Civilizations (UNOAC) continued his efforts to promote interreligious and intercultural dialogue. In this regard, the Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the UNOAC High Representative hosted a high level debate in April 2015 on the role of religious leaders on issues related to conflict and violent extremism. UNOAC also supported dialogue and understanding efforts through its Fellowship Programme for young civil society leaders from around the world, and through institutionalizing of an Intercultural Innovation Award.

In April 2015 the United Nations Office on Genocide Prevention and the Responsibility to Protect, with the support of the King Abdullah Centre for Intercultural and Interreligious Dialogue and the Kingdom of Morocco, brought together religious leaders from around the world to discuss their role in preventing incitement to atrocity crimes.

Other activities

In December 2014, UNICRI jointly organised in Rome, Italy, together with the Global Counterterrorism Forum (GCTF), the first "Expert Workshop on Reintegrating Returning Foreign Terrorist Fighters: Challenges and Lessons Learned". A follow-up regional workshop was held in Manila, the Philippines. UNICRI has also been working in the area of de-radicalisation of prisoners and is developing re-entry programming for such prisoners, as well as for returning FTFs.

UNICRI also recently launched a four-year programme to counter radicalisation and violent extremism in the Sahel Maghreb region.

In January 2016, UNICRI initiated work toward developing and implementing a pilot diversion program for juveniles who are at risk or first time involved in FTF activities. In the first step, UNICRI finalised the preliminary desk review on the legal background/conditions in five countries (i.e., Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kenya, Morocco, Nigeria, Tunisia).

In May 2015, UNCCT supported UNESCO, the UNCT Pakistan and the Prime Minister of Pakistan's Youth Programme to convene a Needs Assessment Conference in Islamabad, Pakistan, on Youth Engagement, Skills Development and Employment Facilitation. The project aims to address needs of educational institutions to include technical skills, vocational training to promote of spirit of dialogue, understanding and skills development.

In June 2015, UNESCO convened in Paris an international conference on "Youth and the Internet: fighting radicalisation and extremism". UNESCO is also developing a Teachers' Guide on Violent Extremism, which is expected to be finalized in early 2016.

CTED has prepared six analytical reports on the foreign terrorist fighter phenomenon; raised awareness of the need to ensure full implementation of resolution 2178 (2014) through a wide range of events and activities; and enhanced its collaboration with UN Women and integrated gender as a cross-cutting issue into its activities. To strengthen its capacity to continuously monitor emerging developments, CTED has, pursuant to paragraph 19 of resolution 2129 (2013), established a Global Research Network.

Pillar II: Measures to prevent and combat terrorism

UN entities have stepped up engagement with Member States on a number of Pillar II topics, especially enhancing border control, countering the financing of terrorism and collaborating with regional organisations to develop regional counter-terrorism strategies.

Many UN entities under the umbrella of the CTITF framework, such as UNCCT, CTED, the 1540 Group of Experts, ODA, INTERPOL, OPCW, UNODC and others work to deliver capacity-building initiatives and knowledge-building undertakings. As part of the growing focus on stemming the flow of FTFs, the United Nations has launched or expanded major initiatives on building capacity of border officials and financial regulators. The recent resolutions of the Security Council, including resolution 2253 (2016), provide an impetus to the efforts related to countering the financing of terrorism, and the UNCCT has commenced activities related to addressing the growing threat from kidnapping for ransom in this regard. Keeping ahead of tactics employed by terrorists, the UN system has also carried out activities related to enhancing coordinated border management and addressing weaknesses in border control, especially with regards to securing unmanned spaces between distant border posts. The UN is also keen to explore work in sharing national practices on protecting cyberspace from terrorist attacks.

Activities on law enforcement and border control

The UNCCT Border Security Initiative, which is being implemented jointly with GCTF, and the Governments of Morocco and the United States, will enhance knowledge on good practices in border security and management and increase understanding of capacity needs in key regions and offer ways to address them. The project will also enhance collaboration with border communities and relevant authorities, with particular focus on the Sahel and Horn of Africa.

As a follow-up to the CTITF Experts Meeting on Coordinated Border Management, which took place at INTERPOL HQ in May 2015, the CTITF Working Group on Border Management and Law Enforcement held a subsequent workshop on coordinated border management in Nairobi, Kenya in December 2015.

Activities on preventing and responding to WMD attacks

To improve the ability of the UN system to respond to possible chemical or biological attacks the UNCCT implemented a project entitled 'Ensuring effective inter-agency interoperability and coordinated communication in case of chemical or biological attacks' jointly with OPCW and IAEA.

The IAEA established two Working Groups open to Member States to improve coordination of efforts in two areas -the Border Monitor Working Group (BMWG), and the Working Group on Radioactive Source Security (WGRSS). It also trained over 6000 individuals in nuclear security in over 200 courses and workshops. It assisted States in establishing Nuclear Security Support Centres, and continued to organise and facilitate meetings for the International Network for Nuclear Security Training and Support Centres (NSSC Network).

The UN Office for Disarmament Affairs (ODA) contributed to the efforts of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540 (2004) to enhance its engagement with Member States and their implementation efforts. Over 60 events in this regard have been held during the last two years. These activities have led to 21 Member States submitting voluntary national implementation action plans as encouraged by Resolution 1977 (2011).

Activities on combating the financing of terrorism

The UNCCT also launched a project on 'International Good Practices on Addressing and Preventing Kidnapping for Ransom (KFR)' which seeks to contribute to curbing the ability of terrorist organisations to raise funds through KFR. The Centre is also supporting a UNODC implemented project on 'Mock Trials on Financing of Terrorism' which seeks strengthen capacity of criminal justice officials in Argentina and Colombia to counter the financing of terrorism.

Activities on protecting vulnerable targets, critical infrastructure and the Internet

INTERPOL is developing a proactive SOCMINT (Social Media Intelligence) program, with both analytical and operational components, to support member countries to address the challenges and opportunities created by increasing use of internet and other information tools by terrorist groups such as ISIL.

Under the CTITF Working Group on Strengthening the Protection of Vulnerable Targets, the CTITF Office undertook a project to deliver capacity-building trainings to UN field security officers.

Pillar III: Measures to build States' capacity to prevent and combat terrorism and to strengthen the role of the United Nations system in this regard

Pillar III recognizes that States need to have the capacity to prevent and combat terrorism, and that international assistance in that regard must be provided in a coordinated and coherent manner. It specifically envisages a strong role for the UN in the provision and coordination of such coherent assistance in all four pillars of the Global Strategy. The CTITF's Integrated Assistance in Countering Terrorism (I-ACT) initiative, described in the main report, is designed specifically to provide holistic assistance to a requesting State by strengthening coordination and coherence among all UN entities working in that country.

Enhancing the implementation of legal and international instruments, providing legal assistance and enhancing the capacity of criminal justice officials and law enforcement officers

Most Member States visited by CTED continue to experience difficulties in their efforts to implement a robust criminal justice system framework for dealing with complex terrorism cases. CTED and other relevant UN entities continue to provide necessary assistance to Member States in this area.

DPKO and DPA-led field missions have also contributed in this regard. The United Nations Stabilization Mission in Mali (MINUSMA) supported the elaboration of a national strategy to counter both organised crime and terrorism, and supported the Government in the establishment of a specialised judicial unit on terrorism and transnational organised crime (Pôle Judiciaire Spécialisé). In Afghanistan, UNAMA worked closely with the Taqin legislative Department at the MoJ and the parliament to draft new laws and/or amend existing laws in relation to terrorism. In Libya, UNSMIL provided technical assistance to the national MOJ while drafting the Libyan counter terrorism law in 2014. In Syria, UNSMIS reviewed the amendments of the Syrian counter terrorism law (2012) and highlighted the deficiency and contravention of its provisions with the international standards of human rights and due process.

UNODC has continued to promote the ratification of the 19 international legal instruments related to terrorism and to support Member States with their implementation. Since the establishment of the Global Programme on Strengthening the Legal Regime against Terrorism, UNODC's support resulted in 668 additional ratifications of the international legal instruments by assisted Member States, 139 pieces of legislation revised or drafted with UNODC assistance and more than 24,000 criminal justice officials provided with the enhanced knowledge and expertise in terrorism prevention issues. In 2015, legislative services were provided to 25 Member States, and more than 100 national and regional capacity building workshops were carried out. In 2015 UNODC in partnership with the EU and other donors launched a technical assistance initiative on Strengthening the Legal Regime against Foreign Terrorist Fighters in MENA and Balkan countries. Similar assistance was commenced for Central Asia, South East Asia and the Sahel. In addition, UNODC, in coordination with UNICEF, also initiated assistance to Cameroon, Chad, Niger and Nigeria on the criminal justice aspects of treatment of children allegedly involved with terrorist groups.

UNODC has been also implementing a project on strengthening national capacity for human rights compliance in criminal justice responses to terrorism. A training module on Human Rights and Criminal Justice Responses to Terrorism has been developed and considerably utilized in training and development of country-specific training materials, for example in Kenya and Nigeria. Ongoing technical assistance in the MENA region was complemented with a four-year initiative for Maghreb countries on Effective Counter-Terrorism Investigations and Prosecutions while Respecting Human Rights and the Rule of Law. A similar project has been successfully implemented for eight South Asian countries. UNODC has also launched a project to assist Member States upon request to improve the response of prison administrations to violent extremism in prisons, and it has been working on a comprehensive handbook on this topic to be used as a basis for such assistance.

By the end of 2015 UNODC/TPB has developed and integrated in its technical assistance programmes 38 tools and publications to support the implementation of the international legal instruments related to terrorism. The latest publications developed include Good Practices for Supporting Victims of Terrorism within a Criminal Justice Framework.

Other activities

The UNCCT has established a rapidly deployable List of Counter-Terrorism Advisors to support Member States on four key thematic areas: developing counter-terrorism strategies, countering radicalisation, vulnerable targets and victims support.

Through its project on 'Facilitating the Development of a Regional Counter-Terrorism Strategy for Southern Africa' the UNCCT worked with SADC Member States to develop a preventive and comprehensive regional counter-terrorism strategy for Southern Africa, which was adopted in August 2015. Likewise, the Centre, working closely with CTED and UNOCA, supported the development of an Integrated Counter-Terrorism and Non-Proliferation of Arms Strategy in Central Africa, which was adopted in [November] 2015. The Centre continued its work to fostering international counter-terrorism cooperation and promoting collaboration between national, regional and international counter-terrorism centres and initiatives, including by organising a conference of such CT Centres in Brussels and developing the Network against Terrorism web portal.

Pillar IV: Measures to ensure the protection of human rights and the rule of law while combating terrorism

Pillar IV of the Global Strategy calls on Member States to respect human rights, fundamental freedoms and the rule of law in all their counter-terrorism efforts. Pillar IV also seeks to promote and protect the rights of victims of terrorism.

Basic human rights reference guides

Under the CTITF Working Group led by OHCHR, progress has been made in the development of a series of reference guides for providing practical guidance for national action on human rights-compliant counter-terrorism measures. UNCCT has supported the updating of the reference guides on the stopping and searching of persons and on security infrastructure. Other relevant reference guides are in process of publication.

Support for victims of terrorism

CTITF/UNCCT organised the Conference on The Human Rights of Victims of Terrorism was held in New York on 11 February 2016, which strengthened understanding of the human rights of victims of terrorism at the international, regional and national level.

The UNCCT project on “Amplifying voices, building campaigns: Training and capacity building on the media in establishing a communications strategy for victims of terrorism” will hold the first two workshops in the Middle East and North Africa/Sahel regions in the second and third quarter of 2016.

The UN Victims of Terrorism Support Portal, launched during the fourth review of the Strategy, has had over 121,000 guest users by January 2016.

UNODC has been working with Member States to strengthen the implementation of national legislation and policies that support and protect victims of acts of terrorism. To maximize the impact of its technical assistance in this area, it has developed specialized tools, such as The Criminal Justice Response to Support Victims of Acts of Terrorism and Good Practices for Supporting Victims of Terrorism within a Criminal Justice Framework, that are fully integrated in UNODC’s provision of assistance.

Further activities to implement all the four pillars of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy are reflected in the summary matrix below:

Supplementary information: Matrix of United Nations Counter-Terrorism Projects and Activities

This summary matrix of counter-terrorism projects being carried out by UN entities under the CTITF framework is based on a more comprehensive CTITF matrix which was developed to promote transparency among UN agencies, ensure more rational allocation of resources to counter terrorism projects and avoid overlaps and duplication. The summary matrix provides a snapshot of the range and breadth of counter-terrorism-related assistance of the United Nations and is hoped to facilitate an efficient and balanced provision of capacity-building assistance across the four pillars of the Strategy. The global reach of these projects, covering diverse subregions such as West Africa, South Asia, Eastern Europe and the Middle East, demonstrates the resourcefulness of UN entities and the opportunities available for pooling resources and synergies. As such, it serves as a valuable source of information for programming, monitoring and evaluating projects.

This CTITF Matrix of UN Counter-Terrorism Projects and Activities includes essential information on all United Nations Counter-Terrorism Projects and Activities being carried out or planned by CTITF Entities. The Matrix is a practical information tool and a live data-base updated regularly by the CTITF Office in consultation with CTITF entities. As of December 2015, CTITF Entities have a total of 295 projects across the 4 pillars of the Strategy: 110 projects under Pillar I; 57 projects under Pillar II; 108 projects under Pillar III and 20 projects under Pillar IV.

The CTITF matrix shows that the United Nations counter-terrorism projects and activities have significantly expanded its geographical scope since 2014. Most projects currently are under Pillars I and III, which indicates that CTITF entities acknowledge importance to address the conditions conducive to spread of terrorism with a particular emphasis on youth, and to undertake necessary measures to build states' capacity to combat and prevent terrorism. Projects under Pillar II have more than doubled in number since the emergence of a new phenomenon of FTFs, and encompass important topics related to border controls, countering the financing of terrorism, spread of WMD, and information sharing capacities of member states. Pillar III projects have enlarged the scope of capacity-building activities, including strengthening law enforcement and criminal justice system capacities and enhancing collaboration among states and relevant institutions. The Matrix indicates a significant improvement in the collaborative work of member states and relevant agencies in terms of protection of human rights and the rule of law while countering terrorism (Pillar IV).
